

You live. You die. If you only respond to life's demands, you spend your life as a fool. If you demand and achieve your desired response from life, you are wise.

If you teach your wisdom to others you are a leader. If you teach the overcoming of life for the well-being of others then you are spiritually blessed. Thus you will know how to control life, share material things gained with others in need, finding wealth in the love and respect of God's other children whose lives you have lovingly touched.

You live. You die. Will your legacy be the one of a fool?

Will you be seen as the one of wisdom without purpose?

Recognized as the leader without direction? Or will you be known as the good and faithful servant of God?
